BIT

SINCE 1940

Beijing, the capital of China, is a national central city and megacity. It is endowed with the functions of the country's political, cultural and international exchange and scientific and technological innovation center.

Situated in northeastern Zhejiang Province, central part of the Yangtze Delta, Jiaxing holds an advantaged geographic location. The city is approximately 100 kilometers away from both Shanghai and Hangzhou, with a journey time of around 30 minutes by high-speed rail.

Zhuhai, located in the southern part of Guangdong Province, is China's second largest port city after Shenzhen. It is the only city in the Chinese mainland with both a bridge to Hong Kong and roads to Macao. Both Guangzhou and Shenzhen are approximately 120 kilometers from Zhuhai, with a journey time of around 55 minutes to Guangzhou by high-speed rail and 2 hours to Shenzhen by coach.
